BOOKS IN THE UPPER HALF

PUBLIC LIBRARY

CITY OF BOSTON

PREFATORY NOTICE.

THE Trustees of the Public Library have the pleasure, by means of the present Index, to open for the use of their fellow-citizens another portion of the books which have been intrusted to their care. It embraces about fifty-five thousand volumes, all in the Upper Hall of the building, as the previous Index, published in 1858, with its supplements coming down to near the end of 1860, embraces about nineteen thousand volumes in the Lower Hall. Almost the whole of the books whose titles are contained in the present Index, were either given by benefactors of the Institution, or have been purchased with the income of funds established by those benefactors for this express purpose,—the largest and most important part of the collection having come directly from the munificence of the chief patron and friend of the Library, Joshua Bates, Esq., of London. To these, however, should still be added, in order to give a just idea of the present condition of the Institution, the rich collection of more than eleven thousand volumes very recently received as a bequest from the late Rev. Theodore Parker; and about two thousand duplicates, and nearly six thousand other volumes, chiefly given by different generous individuals, but which, having been acquired since the printing of the present Index was begun, are necessarily not included in it. The aggregate number of volumes in the Library is thus nearly ninety-three thousand, constituting a collection, which, as it is hardly eight years since it was seriously begun, is alike creditable to its founders and friends, and to the city which has sustained and fostered it so liberally.

The largest number of volumes in any one general division of the Library, is in that of Government, Administration, and Public Economy. The greatest pecuniary value of the books in any one general division, is in that of the Natural Sciences, the Exact Sciences, and the Mechanic Arts. In each of the departments constituting these divisions, the Library may be considered strong for one of its size; and so it is in English History, in Music, and in some others, for which Mr. Bates has especially cared. In the remainder, it is not so strong; although, in the history of the principal nations of the world, in books of travel, and in general literature, it cannot be considered relatively weak. But, in all, a foundation has been laid, and it is confidently believed, that time alone is wanting to make each department what it should be.

The Index now offered to the public will not, however, by itself, show the condition and resources of the Institution in any one particular, or perhaps even in those particulars that may be deemed most important. For this purpose, the Index of the Lower Hall must be added to the present one of the Upper Hall, as will be readily seen by a reference to such headings as America, Architecture, Boston, Goldsmith, Irving, Shakspeare, and a multitude more, where both of the Indexes, and even the supplements to the smaller one, must be consulted, in order to obtain a knowledge of all the books contained in the Library, either with relation to a given subject or to a given author.

This is an inevitable result of the rapid accumulation of so considerable a collection; large portions of which are to be offered to the public for free use and circulation, as soon as possible after they are acquired. For this inconvenience,—which, after all, is a slight one,—there will, however, be a constantly accruing remedy. The different Indexes and their supplements, will, as occasion may require, be united and consolidated; and, when the Library shall have grown large enough to make it important, and funds shall have been afforded for the purpose, a Catalogue may be published, which, in a single, comprehensive, alphabetical arrangement, shall make known all the resources of the Institution. At present this is impracticable. The collection of books is growing so rapidly, that any Index or Catalogue published to-day, will very imperfectly represent its condition a twelvemonth hence. The Trustees can, therefore, only go on,—perhaps for several years,—in the modest but effective way in which they have begun, printing occasionally such Supplements as will render the Library more and more interesting and useful, by informing those who resort to it what are the successive additions made to its shelves, without compelling them to wait until a Catalogue of the whole can be published.

The present Index is constructed on the same principles with the smaller one of 1858, and is carried out with similar but often more minute cross-references and other details, so as to render it as practical and useful as possible. Like the earlier and smaller one, it has had the advantage of being prepared by C. C. Jewett, Esq., the accomplished Superintendent of the Library, who originally suggested its plan, and who has been faithfully aided in his difficult and perplexing labors by Mr. Frederic Vinton, by Professor William E. Jillson, and by other competent and earnest collaborators. The Trustees believe that it will fulfil its main purpose,—namely, that of making the portion of the Library which it represents, easily accessible to all who may desire to use it; to persons who are little in habits of literary or scientific investigation, as well as to those whose lives are given to study. In this respect, the Trustees believe that it will prove as well fitted to its purpose as the smaller Index of 1858, and they can ask for it no success more entire or more honorable.

Its foundation is laid in the Catalogue proper of the Library, which is in manuscript and on cards of uniform size, alphabetically and compactly arranged in drawers, so as to be easily consulted. The number of these cards is as great as the means at the disposition of the Trustees would permit them to make it,—so great that they will probably never be published as a printed Catalogue. But they will always constitute the materials, out of which any catalogue that may be found needful can be constructed without difficulty; and they will always open the resources of the Library, by a complete list of its authors and subjects, with minute cross-references, and, when needed, with bibliographical notes, on a system so simple and obvious, that, as the Trustees believe, one more convenient or effective is not likely to be devised. Any person who has access to the Institution may consult this Catalogue, with the aid of the Superintendent or one of his assistants, and thus learn at once whatever the Library can offer him for such researches as he desires to make, however detailed and elaborate they may be.

To the great majority of persons, however, the present Index,—which, so far as the Upper Hall is concerned, is a careful abridgment of the Card-Catalogue,—will afford all the facilities they will need. In preparing it, every other consideration has been made subordinate to the desire of rendering it practically useful,—of offering to our fellow-citizens of all classes and conditions, a simple, convenient manual, which shall make the books of the Library and their contents easily and pleasantly accessible. No ideas of theoretical perfection in catalogues, either as to form, as to extent, or as to any nice harmony in their constituent parts, have been allowed to stand, for an instant, in the way of this main purpose. The present Index, therefore, has been made, throughout, a condensed index of subjects as well as of authors, distinguishing from each other, as carefully as possible, those authors who bear the same name, so as to prevent confusion, and arranging the subjects so as to bring under familiar heads all the works that should be grouped together; but always, in relation to both, making as many cross-references as it was thought would be needful in order to facilitate a complete knowledge of whatever the Library contains on any given subject, or by any given author, so far as such an abridgment of the ample Card-Catalogue can do it.

In some of its portions, the preparation of this Index has been a laborious and difficult task. The alphabetical analysis of the Sessional Papers of the British Parliament, and the similar analysis of our own Congressional Documents, constitute cases in point. These collections of the doings of the two governments contain, scattered through above three thousand volumes, a great number of important reports and discussions connected with the present state and progress of the arts of life, and with whatever relates to wise legislation for improving the condition and advancing the welfare of society. And yet these important documents have hardly been accessible hitherto, for want of some compact and convenient guide. In truth, they have been like buried treasures. A minute index to either of them would, indeed, fill many volumes like the present; and therefore nothing of the kind has been here thought of; but it is not doubted that what has been done, embracing as it does, in alphabetical order, under the headings of "United States" and "Great Britain," the topics in both collections deemed of most importance, will prove useful, not only in this Library, but in other similar institutions, and in the business of legislation throughout the country. Difficult and perplexing, therefore, as the task has been, it is hoped that it will, in this way, repay the great amount of time and skill that has been patiently given to it.

It would have been gratifying to the Trustees, and to those engaged in making the Index, if they had been able to do in relation to the Documents of the City of Boston, and the State of Massachusetts, what they have done in relation to the Sessional Papers of the British Parliament and of Congress. But this has not been possible. Notwithstanding the great exertions that have been made to render both of these collections in the Public Library complete, neither is yet ample enough to make an index of its contents important. The Commonwealth, indeed, whose library possesses a full collection of State Documents, is about to make an index of them, which, while it will be too voluminous for our means or wants, will yet furnish all the materials for a condensed alphabetical statement of their contents, corresponding to what has been done for the Sessional Papers of Congress and Parliament, and not less useful. But the city will no doubt await the labors of a City Institution to furnish the facilities in relation to its own documents, that will be more and more wanted every year. Meantime, it is hoped that the fact of these two important deficiencies will be borne in mind by the friends of the Library, and that such of them as have the State or City Documents we need, will assist us in completing our collections. Many such volumes will no doubt be gladly given when it is seen, by reference to our present Index, what they are, and how important it is that we should have them. The rest we shall gladly purchase.

Pamphlets are not, for the most part, included among the works grouped by subjects in the present Index, because few are so important as to justify giving to their titles the room they would require. But all such as are bound are entered under the names of their authors when known, or under the first important word in their titles if the authors are not known; for otherwise they would not be made accessible or useful. The unbound pamphlets are nearly all catalogued, and will, from time to time, be bound and entered in the Indexes that will be successively published. A good collection of pamphlets is among the valuable possessions of any public library. Our collection, which is well begun, will, we hope, be well continued, and be made as ample as possible in whatever relates to our own city, commonwealth, and country. An important addition has just been made to it as a part of the bequest of the late Rev. Mr. Parker, a very desirable and curious portion of which regards the question of slavery in all its aspects.

A principle similar to the one adopted in relation to entering pamphlets in the present Index, has been adopted in relation to such collections as consist of tracts or books brought together for some specified purpose, like Pinkerton's Voyages and Travels, or Force's Tracts in relation to the American Colonies, or Leber's Dissertations connected with the History of France. They will, however, all be found entered as contents under the names of their respective collectors, while each will occur again under the name of its separate author, and, when of sufficient consequence, under its separate subject. Less than this would not have made the portion of the Library here referred to as useful and accessible as it ought to be; more would have rendered the present printed Index too cumbersome and costly. In fact, for the number of volumes it represents, it is already large,—much larger in proportion than any supplement to it will be. The reason is, that the great importance of the large collections like those relating to English, French, and Roman History and Antiquities, as well as to various subjects, both scientific and literary, caused these collections to be early presented to the Library by Mr. Bates, and its other patrons, leaving little of the same class of works to be acquired hereafter. No others occupy so much room, relatively to their size, in the Index; but none more imperatively require their contents to be made known.

In fact, under every aspect and condition, it has been intended to make the present printed Index ample for all the purposes it ought to serve, and whatever may be found wanting in it will, it is hoped, be obtained by a reference to the real Catalogue of the Library,—the Card-Catalogue,—where even the separate works in the various collections, however minute, and the bound pamphlets, however unimportant, no less than all the books and other resources of the Library are grouped under their respective subjects, as well as under the names of their respective authors, and where all are again provided with cross-references so abundant as to prevent them from escaping notice even in a hasty inquiry. But, as has been intimated, for all except exhausting researches upon individual subjects, the printed Indexes will probably be found sufficient; and even where these may fall short, they will point directly to the Card-Catalogue, and facilitate its use; while both taken together, will, in the simplest manner, explain whatever the Library may contain upon any subject or by any author, whether the investigations of the inquirer are general or special, comprehensive or minute.

The titles of a moderate number of books in the present Index are marked with a double asterisk (). All these books, of which the precious library of the late Dr. Bowditch forms the largest portion, have been presented to the city on condition that they shall not be permitted to circulate, but shall always be open for free use in the rooms of the Institution itself,—a wise provision in relation to such books as these generally are, and one which it is hoped may prove the foundation for a large library of reference, which is always of great importance to persons making careful scientific inquiries; but to none so desirable as it is to those who have not convenient arrangements for study at home. We have in New England few collections of this sort, and none that is open so freely as the Public Library of this city.

The most costly, and in many respects the most remarkable book in the Library, is the collection of Patent Specifications, with the subsidiary works to facilitate its use,—all presented by the British Government. Taken together, they make, thus far, nearly seven hundred volumes; more than half of which consist of plates, and the series continues to be sent to the Library from year to year, in the same munificent manner in which the earlier portions were originally given. To fulfil the express terms of its donation, and prevent abuses which have followed elsewhere from mismanagement, it is kept in a room by itself; but can always be consulted by those who have need of the curious and important information it officially records.

Another portion of the titles in the present Index is marked by a simple asterisk (*), to indicate that, although the books they represent can be taken out, it can be only after permission to do so has been asked and granted in a printed form, always kept ready for the purpose in the Library itself. The importance of this arrangement will be apparent to any one who will recollect how many rich and precious volumes of engravings are preserved in our cabinets, and on our shelves, that have been given by friends of the Library who have counted upon having faithful care taken of them, — how many sets of books there are like the Parliamentary Papers, or Congressional Documents, or like the different long series of periodicals which have been given to us in the same expectation, but each of which would lose no small part of its value if its completeness should be impaired, — to say nothing of collections of curious pamphlets, and rare and costly works, which, if lost, can hardly be replaced; or of Encyclopædias and Dictionaries which should, if possible, be always at hand to meet the daily wants of those who frequent the Library for purposes of study or reference; — for all such books, it is plain, should be allowed to go abroad only when a case of sufficient urgency is made out to overbear the common rule. They are, however, of a class rarely wanted outside of the proper rooms of the Institution, although they may be often wanted inside; and no inconvenience, therefore, will be likely to result from the application of a rule much more liberal than the one commonly enforced under the same circumstances in other public libraries. Certainly none resulted from the application of the same rule when it was fully tested, during the period in which the Public Library was established in Mason Street, and certainly no rule of wider indulgence would prevent discreditable losses of rich, rare, and beautiful books, or discreditable injury to them, from careless use.

In offering to their fellow-citizens, however, the important collection of books represented by the present Index, the Trustees do not wish to have it thought that they regard the Public Library as either perfect or ample. Far from it. Grateful as they are to the Superintendent for the principles on which the Card-Catalogue and its Indexes are founded, and for the skill and fidelity with which he and his assistants have carried them out, the Trustees are quite aware that, in the many hundreds of thousands of details involved in a work so perplexing, not a few errors will probably escape the most painstaking and accurate. And still more grateful as they are to the Government of the City, and to the munificent patrons of the Library, — who have filled so many of its shelves with books, and provided funds from which so many more will be filled hereafter, — they do not conceal from themselves the fact that in all its departments the Institution is imperfect, and that in many only a foundation has been laid, and often one less broad than they would gladly have made it. But the past is a sufficient pledge for the future. They cannot, therefore, be disheartened or anxious. On the contrary, they are both gratified and surprised that in so short a time so much has been done and so well; and, for the remainder, which is to make the Library what it ought to be, they rely confidently on its faithful friends, and on the City Government who have made it what it is; never forgetting the community by whose spirit it has been constantly sustained, and to whom the Trustees have, above everything else, desired to make it a fertile and permanent source of improvement, intellectual, — moral, and religious.

EXPLANATIONS.

TWO STARS, prefixed to the shelf number, denote that the book cannot be taken from the library building. ONE STAR denotes that, for reasons already stated, the book so marked can be taken out only by special permission. See Preface, page vi. These stars are affixed to the principal title only,—the title which has the imprint,—and not to other brief entries of the book, called cross-references.

BRACKETS, within titles, inclose words added, or changed in form.

ABBREVIATIONS peculiar to certain long articles are explained in notes prefixed to the articles.

See, for example, Great Britain, Sessional papers, page 335; and United States, Congressional Documents, page 796; and Index to Congressional Documents, page 815. Other abbreviations used in the Index are indeed numerous and various, but they are thought to be so common or so obvious as not to require explanation. 8°, 12°, etc. indicate the apparent size of the book, not always the exact fold of the sheet. Pph. and M. Pph. respectively designate pamphlets and medical pamphlets.

LEARNED SOCIETIES and public institutions are catalogued under the names of the places where they are established.

Historiarum Orientalis Indię Quorum XII. In tres libros siue tractatus distribuit. Ytorum primus continet descriptiones chorographicas et topographicas regnorum, provinciarum, insularum, vrbiū, castellorum, emporiorum, montium atque fluviorum, totius illius continentis, quæ vulgo Orientalis India nomine censetur: inprimis Chersones Aureæ, Sinarum, Japonum, Sinus Persici et Gangetici, Oceani Eoi et Littoris Africani: adiectis incolarum moribus et ritibus, ipsiusque soli ingenio et natura. Secundus habet narrationes exquisitas aliquot navigationum et expeditionum marinarum, ab Angliæ Batanisque potissimum, in omnes illas Orientis et Austri partes susceptarum, vi et prælorum aliquot nauticum vario euentu commissarum: quibus accessit Perulipus orbis terræ, à Jacobo Eremita, nauarcho Batano absolutus: quæ historia incipit ab anno AN. C. MDCXIII. terminaturque initis anni MDCXXVI. Tertius tribuitur descriptioni quarundam septentrionalium regionum atque insularum, ante non satis cognitarum, nempe partiæ Scythiæ, Moscoviæ, quæ magna pars est Sarmatiæ Europææ et Asiaticæ, nec non Samogetiæ, Islandiæ, Gronlandiæ et aliarum, quarum plenior notitia, expeditionibus nauarchorum felici industria in eas orbis partes confectis, ad nos peruenit: a primis Aquilonarum navigationum initis ad nostra tempora. I. Ludovicus Gotsfridus ex Angliæ et Belgicæ sermone in Latium transtulit, nouis accessionibus locupletauit, ordinem et concinnitatem addidit: non sine talibus chorographicis et figuris æneis, vnde lumen totæ historiæ. Francofurti, Apud Wilhelmum Fizzerum. . . . MDCXXVIII.
